NYU Rory Meyers College of Nursing	NYC, NY	ABSN postback	Statistics, Chem, A&P, Microbio, Nutrition, Human growth and development, Ethics, Psych	15 months	56K	Yael Nissanoff Simpser	2020	I was in school during the pandemic, so this may be a skewed view of what the program is like normally. It was also the first year that they accepted 150 students instead of 40 to fund their new building. PROS: they were really understanding about chag, and were flexible and understanding when it came to clinical placement on fridays etc. I also felt that there were 25 jews in my cohort which made my experience so much better. CONS: i didnt feel very prepared for the NCLEX, thank Gd i passed on the first try and maybe that was more due to the pandemic, but i felt our quality of education wasn't superb for the price i was paying. I felt the school was pretty disorganized and didnt always listen to the students about their needs. Like every school, some teachers are better than others, but when they found a good teacher, they would overload them and overwork them so they werent able to help students the way we had hoped.

So far, I have been loving my professors and the level of education that I have been receiving. As long as you get a good professor (check ratemyprofessor.com before registering for a class), they will always want you to do well and learn as much as possible. The campus also has a very warm and welcoming environment and most people are more than glas to help answer any questions you may have.
